To: All LabCorp & Covance Employees
From: Steve Anderson & Jared Freedberg
Subject: LabCorp/Covance Integration Update
Date: 5 December 2014

Dear Colleagues,

As the integration team leaders, we are committed to providing the organization with information and updates on the transition goals, activities, and milestones to ensure the appropriate transparency and to help provide you with insights and answers to your questions.

Since the announcement that LabCorp would acquire Covance last month, we've been incredibly impressed by the energy and enthusiasm our leaders and employees have directed toward the opportunity. We've seen both LabCorp and Covance bring their best to the forefront in employee meetings and town halls, and in client outreach efforts. During these discussions it has been strikingly apparent that our combined organization will bring customers an unparalleled level of science, service, and scope of capabilities that will advance personalized medicine, improve the development of therapeutics, and transform drug commercialization – resulting in more effective treatment options for physicians and improved health outcomes for patients.

In that spirit of enthusiasm and great potential we have received many offers of help and interest in serving on the integration team and related work streams. We are grateful for your continued support, and have set ourselves the following initial tasks:

- Recruit and build the Integration Leadership Team,
- Create an Integration Framework for the project,
- Identify a consulting partner to work with us on the integration,
- Create forums to provide employees with regular updates on our progress

Today, we are pleased to announce the formation of the Integration Leadership Team and the development of an initial Integration Framework.

The team structure and members were selected based on their ability to represent specific functional and business unit areas that will be critical to our combined success. Each functional area will be co-led by contributing team leaders from both LabCorp and Covance. The team leaders are:

Each functional or business area represented on the Integration Leadership Team will form working groups that will focus on specific elements of the integration activities. Many of you will be asked to bring your expertise and perspectives to those working groups.

The Integration Leadership Team will report into a Joint Steering Committee which will include both of us as well as Dave King, Eric Lindblom, and Glenn Eisenberg from LabCorp; and Joe Herring, Jon Koch, and Dr. Ken Somberg from Covance. This steering committee will provide overall project oversight.

We have also worked together to create an Integration Framework designed to ensure both organizations remain focused on three guiding principles which will form the cornerstone of our work:

1. Protect the Base Business – designed to protect and continue promoting the value and core expertise we bring to our clients every day
2. Deliver Combinational Synergies – designed to apply best practices, increase efficiency, and streamline and/or combine areas to produce increased revenue or cost savings
3. Develop Strategic Synergies – designed to create new commercial solutions and offerings from our combined and complementary capabilities

This is an exciting time for our two companies, and each of these principles plays an important role in defining our integration plans and path forward. The combination of LabCorp and Covance has the potential to deliver enormous value for our customers and enormous opportunities for our employees. It is critical to our success that we keep this framework and collaborative spirit in mind as we perform our work.

We want to close by thanking you all for your enthusiasm, excellent questions, and support. As we begin the integration journey, we are committed to transparency and will provide regular updates to answer questions and keep you informed.

Sincerely,

Steve Anderson, PhD
SVP and Global Head, Clinical Trials
