» Tom Horton Discusses Results of a Successful Second Quarter

In a Special Jetwire issued earlier today, Tom Horton provided an update on the company's second-quarter results. AMR posted a net profit of $357 million, excluding reorganization and special items, a $262 million improvement year-over-year and AMR's best second-quarter results in company history. The company recorded a GAAP (Generally Accepted Accounting Principles) net profit of $220 million, a $461 million improvement over second-quarter 2012 and the first second-quarter net profit since 2007. Among the highlights:

Edgar Filing: US AIRWAYS GROUP INC - Form 425

Consolidated and mainline passenger revenue was $5.6 billion and $4.9 billion, respectively the highest passenger revenue for the second quarter in company history.

Operating profit was $502 million, excluding special items, a $254 million improvement over second quarter 2012. GAAP operating profit was $489 million, a $347 million improvement year-over-year.

Consolidated unit costs, excluding fuel and special items, improved 5.8 percent year-over-year, marking the third consecutive quarter of unit cost reduction on that basis.

The company ended the second quarter with approximately $7.1 billion in cash and short-term investments, including a restricted cash balance of $863 million, compared to a balance of approximately $5.8 billion in cash and short-term investments, including a restricted balance of approximately $772 million, at the end of the second quarter of 2012.

Our momentum is building as we plan for our impending merger with US Airways and we are making good progress on the approvals needed to complete the transaction, Tom said. I am proud of you rising above many challenges over the past year and a half. You have stood tall with the pride we all have in this great company and stayed focused on putting American back on top.

For the full second-quarter results, see the news release in American's Newsroom.

» Flagship Check-In Offers Private, Personalized Service in the Windy City

Chicago O'Hare becomes the newest airport today to open a Flagship Check-In facility, designed to be an exclusive and expedited check-in experience for our most valued customers. » Employee Safety Poster Art Contest Open For Voting

During June, children of American Airlines and American Eagle employees were invited to participate in Employee Safety's fourth annual Safety Art Contest. This year's contest theme was "Working Safely at American Airlines," and the period for entries concluded on July 2. Now, Employee Safety needs your help to select the winning artwork. Voting opens today and closes July 19. Votes will be tallied and a winner from each age category will be announced on Monday, July 22. Vote for your favorite entry. There are many things we can do to stay safe, and this is a fun way to get children to think about safety, as well as to help us see safety through a child's eyes. One child from each age group will receive an Apple iPad Mini and compete for a chance for their drawing to be used for the cover of the 2014 Employee Safety calendar. Happy voting!

American Airlines Cargo Upgrades Website

American said its Cargo division has unveiled its new website featuring a new design and enhanced usability. American said the website was designed using feedback from customers and enables future technological advancements that will benefit cargo customers. The new website offers several benefits, which were identified by customers as important features when booking and tracking shipments online. Online tracking is more organized and even easier to navigate with simple icons and a new layout. Everything customers need is now accessible on one page. The original aacargo.com was launched in 2001.

Airbus Prepares for Next Stage of A350 Flight Tests in August

Airbus has started preparing its A350-900 prototype for a second stage of flight tests, having completed initial assessments on primary aircraft systems. The first flight-test aircraft, MSN1, has logged 92 hours of flight time since first becoming airborne on June 14. In addition to testing the Rolls-Royce Trent XWB engines and fuel system, the tests covered the landing-gear and brakes, ram-air turbine, cabin pressurization and electrical systems. Early tests have also been conducted on the autopilot and auto-landing capabilities of the A350. Airbus says the aircraft will spend time on the ground undergoing maintenance and modification of its flight-test installations. The next stage of the test campaign is scheduled to begin in August.

Heathrow Urges Third Runway to Meet Airport Needs

London Heathrow urged the government to let it build a third runway, saying its plans would provide more flights, less noise and be cheaper and quicker to build than rival proposals. The UK government and business leaders want to expand flights to fast-growing economies to ensure the country does not miss out on billions of pounds of trade, and with Heathrow operating at 99 percent capacity, additional runways are needed. Heathrow submitted three options - building a new runway to the north, northwest or southwest of the hub - to a government commission looking into raising airport capacity, which is due to publish an interim report by the end of next year, with a final verdict due in mid-2015, after the next general election. Each option would deliver extra capacity by 2025-2029, and would be cheaper and quicker to build than rival hub options being proposed by London Mayor Boris Johnson and Stansted Airport, Heathrow said. Johnson is backing the development of a rival airport and earlier this week set out his plans, which include a new four-runway hub 40 miles east of central London and the possible demolition of Heathrow.
