1. Letter to Employees from Young Sohn, Samsung's President and Chief Strategy Officer

December 6, 2016

Dear HARMAN employees,

Since Samsung and HARMAN announced our combination three weeks ago, Dinesh and I have visited a number of HARMAN facilities and met several HARMAN customers. On November 21, Dinesh visited Korea and met with Samsung's top management to share many thoughts from the HARMAN perspective about the future. Following those meetings, I wanted to write you to say that we are even more excited than ever about what we can all achieve. Everyone we have spoken to appreciates the logic behind combining our companies and understands how together we can grow faster and better meet our customers' needs.

Having met with many HARMAN employees, I am even more impressed with the caliber of your talent and sense of teamwork, and I am really looking forward to working with you all once the transaction has been completed. Of course, in any transaction such as this, there are questions about how we will manage the integration and what it will be like being part of the Samsung family, so I wanted to take this opportunity to address those questions and reaffirm my view that this combination will create significant opportunities for HARMAN employees and customers.

First, let me say that HARMAN's industry-leading team, and the strong winning culture you have built is one of the major reasons we are attracted to HARMAN and we do not intend to change that. This transaction is about growth. HARMAN will operate as a standalone company led by the same excellent leadership team you have now, and we want you to continue on your current path. HARMAN's name and its brands will remain unchanged. As we move forward, Samsung and HARMAN will discuss together new business and growth opportunities and how to pursue them.

Second, I understand that there could be some concerns about combining the organizational cultures of the two companies. Samsung will keep HARMAN's culture and current organization structure. I firmly believe that both companies have similar cultures that focus on speed, innovation, leading-edge technologies, execution and customer focus, and we want to keep that as it is. As such, Samsung will consistently listen to your voices.

Third, Samsung has no plans to change the make-up of the organization going forward. In this regard, we do not anticipate that any offices will be combined/changed/relocated globally except in the ordinary course of business of HARMAN. The employees will continue to report to the same supervisor. There will be no changes to your job responsibilities as a result of this transaction or to your performance management system except in the ordinary course of business of HARMAN.

Fourth, Samsung is a leading global company with compensation and benefits systems that are very similar to HARMAN's, and Samsung understands HARMAN's current system very well. Therefore, we have no plans to change your compensation, benefit systems and pay structure after closing. After the transaction is completed, new issuances of HARMAN's equity-based awards (e.g., RSUs, Stock Options, etc.) would be replaced by cash-based ones, which we expect will be equivalent or comparable to current ones. Samsung and HARMAN management are working to finalize the new plan for post-closing awards in the near future.

Finally, Dinesh and I share a passion for transparency and open communications. Both Samsung and HARMAN's management teams will continue to listen to your opinions and issues and will share formal communications for preparing closing and post-closing operations. In addition, Samsung will work with HARMAN's management team to create a communication process so we can hear from you, as well as keep you informed of our progress.

The HARMAN customers I have spoken to definitely see the potential of this combination and look forward to HARMAN being able to access Samsung's global scale, R&D capabilities and resources. We expect this will enable us to accelerate innovation and drive faster, greater growth across all four businesses in the automotive, consumer, and professional end markets. We are confident that, together, we can drive even greater growth and success for our company, our employees and our customers, and together we will also enable professional growth opportunities for HARMAN employees.

Of course the transaction is subject to approval by regulators and HARMAN shareholders, so until it closes, which we expect will be mid-2017, HARMAN and Samsung remain separate companies and we must all continue to focus on business as usual.

I am very much looking forward to working with all of you and wish you all the very best for the upcoming holiday season.

Yours sincerely,

/s/ Young Sohn
