Magic Software Subsidiary CoreTech Wins Phase II Of $500K EAI Project For Global Human Resources Firm

Implementation Includes Architectural Design, Development and Deployment of Survey Management, Workflow, and Business Intelligence Engine for Global Customer Base

Irvine, California (January 27, 2004) - Magic Software Enterprises (Nasdaq: MGIC), a leading provider of state-of-the-art business integration and development technology, announced today that its subsidiary CoreTech Consulting Group, LLC, has won a major phase II expansion of a project deal to provide architectural design, development and enterprise application integration (EAI) services to a global Human Resources Consulting company. The total value of the project now stands at over $500,000.

The new project scope requires a complete reengineering of the client's existing enterprise application, integration with Microsoft's .Net architecture, and optimization of the client's business processes and procedures. CoreTech is providing a multi-disciplinary team of project managers, architects, developers, and reporting designers and is expected to deliver the final working application by midyear.

Human resource firms are constantly striving to increase the quality and consistency of outsourced personnel and activities to reduce workloads, control costs, attract and retain the right people, and improve employee job satisfaction, said Mark A. Redlus, President & CEO of CoreTech. By providing the right mix of domain and technological know-how, CoreTech is helping these organizations meet their goals.

We are witnessing an upturn in customer demand to optimize business processes, and maximize and protect their legacy investments by leveraging emerging technologies, said Menachem Hasfari, CEO of Magic Software. "CoreTech continues to provide the expert consultants and development teams required to enable companies to execute their strategic initiatives.
