2 MR. ARCHIBALD: I want to thank you all
3 for being here this morning. We also appreciate
4 having John Lundgren here with us, the chief 5 executive officer of Stanley. And following my 6 brief introductory remarks, we'll hear from John 7 and he will share with you his vision for the 8 combined Stanley Black & Decker Company. Then 9 we'll also give you an opportunity to ask any 10 questions that you would like. And this is being 11 telecast in a lot of different locations, and 12 they'll also be able to dial up and be able to 13 listen in to both presentations as well as the 14 question and answer period any time that they 15 would like.

16 I'm sure when you first heard about the 17 merger between Black & Decker and Stanley, the 18 first two questions that likely came to your mind 19 is why are they doing this and why are they doing 20 this now. And I hope to answer those two 21 questions and tell you some additional thoughts

1 of how all of this evolved.

2 Black & Decker and Stanley have a very 3 unique fit and complementary fit that I think 4 very few, if any, companies have throughout the 5 world that produce significant shareholder value
6 through cost synergies; through sales, marketing, 7 and distribution synergies; and a combined
8 financial strength that neither company has on a 9 standalone basis. As I said, I don't believe 10 there is another company in the world who fits 11 quite together like Stanley and Black & Decker.

12 And that's probably why this combination 13 has been attempted three times before the current 14 one that we're talking about. Let me begin by 15 telling you about the long courtship that's 16 happened between our two companies, Stanley and 17 Black & Decker. Twenty-eight years ago then-CEO 18 Frank Lucier of Black & Decker and Don Davis, the 19 CEO of Stanley at the time, those two had 20 extensive discussions and negotiations about 21 putting Black & Decker and Stanley together. I

1 am told that they had arrived and reached
2 agreement on every single factor except one. I'm 3 also told that Al Decker was enthusiastic about 4 this combination. And the reason it didn't 5 consummate was because they could not decide who 6 the CEO would be. And so based on that one item, 7 the negotiations broke down.

8 About seven years after that, Dick
9 Ayers, then Stanley CEO, and I had some serious 10 discussions about putting these two companies
11 together. We concluded that it was not a 12 compelling transaction at that time, and so 13 negotiations didn't go any further.

14 Almost seven years after that I got a 15 call from John Trani, the new CEO of Stanley, and 16 he asked if he could meet with me. We met 17 together and he also thought that these two 18 companies should be put together. And we had 19 some discussions about that, but again we just 20 did not feel it was compelling to our 21 shareholders, the deal we eventually talked

1 about.

2 Seven months ago I got another call.

3 This time it was from John Lundgren, and he

4 wanted to have lunch with me. And I said, Well,

5 for what reason? He said, I would like to talk

6 to you about putting our two companies together.

7 I told him that we were not looking to sell the 8 company, we were not looking for a merger

9 partner. I didn't think that neither of our time

10 would be well spent if we got together.

11 And he said, well, we've taken a lot of 12 time to look at this and we think there are some

13 tremendous advantages for both companies and both

14 companies' shareholders and both companies'

15 employees, and will you just hear me out.

16 So he and I met for lunch in New York

17 City and discussed the possibility for a fourth

18 time of putting these two companies together.

19 And I told him that I would think about it.

20 Well, as I returned and we gathered just 21 very, very few people to look at this, the more

1 we looked at this, and the more we thought that 2 there might be some great potential here, that 3 then evolved into taking a few of our people and 4 a few of their people and meeting in New York
5 City to explore the benefits of both companies 6 and both companies' shareholders.

7 After considerable analysis, after 8 considerable time and additional meetings with 9 the Stanley and Black & Decker people, our board 10 concluded that this was both strategically and 11 financially compelling to our shareholders to 12 discuss seriously about merging these two 13 companies. We also felt like it was in the best 14 interests of our company and our company's 15 employees, and I'll talk about that in just a few 16 minutes.

17 First of all, let me tell you why our 18 board concluded that this was financially
19 compelling to our shareholders. There are three 20 phases of significant shareholder creation in 21 merging Black & Decker and Stanley, for Black &

1 Decker shareholders. The first is a 22 percent
2 premium. Each Black & Decker shareholder will 3 receive 1.275 of Stanley shares for each 4 Black & Decker share. At the time of the 5 announcement, this represented a 22 percent
6 premium over the existing Black & Decker stock 7 price. Now, that premium represents a very 8 competitive offer when you compare it to other 9 similar transactions.

10 In addition to the 22 percent premium,
11 the board also wanted to preserve the long-term 12 benefits for our shareholders once the economy 13 turns around. So with a 22 percent premium, why 14 did Black & Decker's stock price increase 15 31 percent at the time of the announcement? The 16 reason that it did is because our shareholders 17 and the market understood Phase 2 and Phase 3 of 18 the significant shareholder creation.

19 Phase 2 factors in the cost synergies 20 that you're able to achieve by combining these 21 two very uniquely and complementary companies.

1 When we announced the merger of these two 2 companies, we also announced that we believed 3 that we could achieve $350 million of cost 4 savings by combining these two companies. The 5 present value of $350 million in cost synergies
6 is in excess of $2 billion of shareholder value
7 creation. Now, that's $2 billion of shareholder 8 value creation without any additional increase in 9 sales, without one dollar increase in sales and 10 no improvement in the economy. If you combine 11 our share of the synergies, of that $350 million 12 in synergies with a 22 percent premium, that 13 represents almost a 50 percent premium for our 14 shareholders versus the time of the announcement.

15 Now, because of the $350 million in 16 synergies, Stanley's stock also increased 17 10 percent at the time of the announcement.
18 Now, it is very unusual -- in fact, one of our 19 directors, Ben Griswold says unprecedented -- 20 that you would see in an all-stock transaction 21 both companies' stock increase to those levels.

1 Because even though Stanley is paying a premium 2 as a result of the exchange ratio, because of 3 their share of the $350 million in synergies, 4 Stanley's shareholders will have significant 5 accretion in year two and thereafter, after the 6 merged companies. The 22 percent premium on day 7 one and the additional premium that's associated 8 with the cost synergies makes this a very 9 compelling financial transaction for our 10 shareholders.

11 However, this is not all. There is a 12 third phase in our shareholder creation.
13 Because of the exchange ratio of 1.275,
14 Black & Decker shareholders will own
15 49.5 percent of the combined company and Stanley 16 will own 50.5 percent of the combined company.
17 Therefore we will share equally in all of the 18 upside that occurs after the economy recovers.
19 And we believe that the upside of these two 20 powerful companies is considerable and is far 21 better than either company on a standalone basis.

1 It is estimated that the combined
2 company will generate over $1 billion of free 3 cash flow. It will generate $1.5 billion of 4 EBITDA. It will have an exceptionally strong
5 balance sheet and a strong investment grade 6 rating. With $1 billion in cash flow and the 7 strong balance sheet that we have, the combined 8 company will have the capacity to make 9 significant acquisitions and fund future growth.

10 And lastly Stanley has a rich history of 11 paying a very generous dividend to its 12 shareholders. Their dividend is nearly three 13 times the amount that Black & Decker's dividend 14 is, and our shareholders will enjoy after the 15 companies are combined.

16 In addition to being very financially
17 compelling, this is also a very strategically 18 compelling transaction for our company and its 19 shareholders. While our products don't compete, 20 many of our products are sold to the same markets 21 and the same end users. So in addition to the

1 cost synergies that we'll enjoy from combining 2 these two companies, there will also be 3 considerable sales synergies.

4 There are some geographic areas and 5 channels where Black & Decker has superior
6 strength in distribution. For example,
7 Black & Decker has a complete infrastructure and 8 very strong distribution system in Latin America;
9 Stanley does not. We will be able to sell a
10 complete line of Stanley products through Black &
11 Decker's distribution system in Latin America.
12 Black & Decker has stronger distribution in the 13 Middle East, India, Eastern Europe, and STAFDA
14 here in the United States, where we should be 15 able to increase Stanley products.

16 On the other hand, Stanley has much 17 stronger distribution in industrial, both in the 18 United States and Europe. It is also larger than 19 Black & Decker in China. And these are only just 20 a few of the examples of the sales and 21 distribution opportunities that these two

1 combined companies will have.

2 We'll also have cross-branding
3 opportunities with the strong stable of brands 4 that you see both in Black & Decker and in 5 Stanley. DeWalt, Stanley, Black & Decker, 6 Bostitch, Porter-Cable, Delta are only a few of 7 the brands that we have in each company.

8 In Europe we currently license the Black
9 & Decker name and sell a line of hand tools. It 10 is also not hard to imagine a mechanic line of 11 DeWalt tools.

12 Our lock and lockset business will be 13 very complementary to Stanley's mechanical 14 security business. And we have envied their 15 electronic security business and we wanted to 16 enter this area for many years. As a result of 17 Stanley's recent aggressive acquisition program,
18 security now represents 43 percent of Stanley's 19 total sales and is very complementary to our own 20 security business.

21 Black & Decker will also become a much

1 less cyclical company and less dependent on a few 2 customers. We currently have 30 percent of our 3 sales to two very large customers. Stanley has 4 eight percent of their sales to those two 5 customers. And we'll also have a much broader 6 product line and will be selling in a large 7 geographical area across many different markets,
8 will be a much larger, more stable, less cyclical 9 company with strong free cash flow that will help 10 us further diversify in the years ahead.

11 For all these reasons, our board felt 12 like this was both strategically and financially 13 compelling to our shareholders. That's why both 14 stocks have increased so dramatically. That's 15 why an attempt to merge these companies has taken 16 place four different times. It's also why every 17 investment banker that we've visited with over 18 the last 25 years have always said, well, now, 19 our best idea for you is that you really ought to 20 merge Stanley and Black & Decker. This was an 21 obvious fit to everyone, and our shareholders

1 have clearly demonstrated their vote in favor of 2 this by what's happened to the stock price.

3 Now, how is this good for you, the 4 employees of Black & Decker? There will be a 5 reduction in personnel to avoid duplication.
6 This reduction will be less than ten percent.
7 There is no way to put a good face on what will 8 happen to corporate. There can only be one 9 corporate headquarters. Some people at corporate 10 will have opportunities with the combined 11 company, but most will not. Frankly, this was 12 the most difficult part of the entire negotiation
13 and merger decision process. We'll be generous 14 and treat those that will not have a continuing 15 role with the company as fairly as we can and do 16 everything possible to help them find new jobs.

17 However, for the vast majority of 18 Black & Decker employees who will continue with 19 the combined company, this will be very good for 20 you. You will have the professional 21 opportunities that will result from being part of

1 a much larger company. You will be part of a 2 lower cost, much more competitive company that is 3 an industry powerhouse.

4 You will be part of a company that's 5 less cyclical and therefore less susceptible to 6 the swings of the economy and the accompanying 7 layoffs that come from being part of a cyclical 8 company. And what usually ends up best for 9 shareholders usually ends up best for the 10 employees that work for that company. Because 11 shareholders want to continue to invest in 12 companies that yield a good return, and therefore 13 you're able to invest in the company and grow it 14 for more professional opportunities.

15 And this combined company will be a 16 strong and dynamic competitor in the marketplace.

17 And I believe that once we get through this 18 transition and all the uncertainty, you will be 19 proud to be part of this global marketing 20 powerhouse.

21 I would now like to introduce you to

1 John Lundgren, who will become CEO of the new 2 Stanley Black & Decker. As you know, I will 3 become executive chairman of the board with the 4 combined company. John has done a remarkable job
5 of reinventing Stanley in the five years that 6 he's been CEO of the company. He has introduced 7 the Stanley fulfillment system that I believe 8 will make our operation more productive and 9 effective.

10 John began his career in brand
11 management with Gillette. He has held positions 12 in marketing, finance, manufacturing, corporate 13 development, and strategic planning in the United 14 States and Europe with Georgia Pacific and its 15 predecessor companies. In fact, John has lived 16 in Europe for 14 years of his professional 17 career. He was an executive officer of Georgia
18 Pacific and in charge of all of their consumer 19 products companies.

20 John graduated cum laude from Dartmouth
21 College where he was a two-time golf captain.

1 In fact, he serves as a director of Callaway
2 Golf. I'm sure he'll be glad to challenge any of 3 you to a golf game. He holds an MBA from 4 Stanford University, and I look forward to 5 working with John in my new role as chairman of 6 the combined companies. So at this time I'd like 7 to introduce you to John Lundgren.

8 MR. LUNDGREN: Nolan, thanks. That was 9 very kind.

10 Good morning to everybody. I normally 11 would be more comfortable roaming the floor and 12 talking, but given the status of this merger and 13 the fact that it's not closed yet, I'll stick a 14 little closer to the script than I normally do.
15 But hopefully over time we'll get to meet and 16 talk on a much more informal basis.

17 But it's certainly great to be here, and 18 I appreciate the courtesy certainly that Nolan 19 and the executive team have extended to me while 20 I've been here. And it's great to be with you 21 this morning and talk to you about how we think

1 we can combine these two great companies.

2 We've already started working together
3 cooperatively and collaboratively with each other 4 to the extent, as Nolan indicated, that we've 5 been able and legally allowed to do so.

6 And the spirit not only continues today but will 7 continue throughout the coming months as we 8 undertake the task of putting these two companies 9 together to create the best of Stanley and the 10 best of Black & Decker in the new company.

11 And I'm deeply respectful of the rich 12 histories that both these companies bring to the 13 party. But my primary objective this morning is 14 actually to begin the process of looking forward 15 to the future, rather than looking back into our 16 respective and separate pasts. I'd like you to 17 consider just for a moment Stanley Black & Decker 18 of the future, a new company with the talent, the 19 skill, and the resources to expand globally at an 20 accelerated pace. The combination of our two 21 companies is a step on a transformational journey

1 towards becoming a global, diversified,
2 industrial growth company.

3 It's an important, it's a significant,
4 it's even an historic step. But importantly,
5 it's only the first step. The real strength of 6 this combination is the potential it unlocks for 7 the future of the combined Stanley Black & 8 Decker, and the sooner we begin to focus on the 9 future, the more successful we will ultimately 10 be.

11 So let's start today. Today I'd like to 12 lay out three things for you. I briefly recap 13 the strategic rationale for combining the two 14 companies, without duplicating too much of what 15 Nolan presented, as I think it was done as 16 clearly and concisely as it could possibly be 17 done in Nolan's brief introduction. I'll tell 18 you where we stand today about six weeks after 19 the announcement, and finally I'll discuss our 20 vision for the new company, the combined Stanley
21 Black & Decker.

1 I'm sure you're well aware of the 2 strategy behind the transaction, but let me just 3 reiterate it quickly. We're two great companies 4 with long and rich legacies, and we're in a 5 unique position to forge a new company built on 6 our strengths by bringing together two highly 7 complementary companies, as you see at the top of 8 the slide, with a portfolio of iconic brands and 9 virtually no product overlap.

10 The new Stanley Black & Decker will 11 offer a comprehensive global product line in both 12 hand tools and power tools and will be positioned 13 to better serve the end users whose loyalty we've 14 earned and the customers whose business we will 15 continue to earn each and every day. The new 16 Stanley Black & Decker will also build on our 17 respective strengths in a way that's consistent 18 with each company's core strategies and in a way 19 that will allow us to continue to invest in our 20 growth platforms. And finally, the new Stanley 21 Black & Decker will build on commitment to

1 operational excellence and continuous improvement 2 to ensure that we're able to capitalize on the 3 significant cost and revenue synergies, but of 4 equal or greater importance, to ensure that we as 5 a new combined company unlock the full potential 6 of the new enterprise.

7 The combination of our two companies,
8 the creation of the new Stanley Black & Decker, 9 is a compelling strategic combination of two 10 great companies that will create significant 11 value for our customers and our shareholders and 12 will create significant opportunities for our new 13 employees. However, there are a few steps we've 14 got to take to ensure that we do this right. I'd 15 like to tell you where we stand, again about six 16 weeks to the day after our announcement.

17 As you know, we must obtain both 18 shareholder and regulatory approval. These are 19 two separate paths that we're pursuing diligently 20 to ensure successful closure of this transaction 21 during the first half of 2010. On the regulatory

1 side, we have determined which of the 190
2 countries where Stanley and Black & Decker both 3 sell that require formal antitrust filings. And 4 in many cases we've already filed the necessary 5 documents and opened lines of communications with 6 the regulators to openly and transparently
7 address any issues or any concerns that could 8 arise from their perspective.

9 In the United States, for instance, the 10 Federal Trade Commission is currently conducting 11 their initial review of the proposed transaction.
12 And they have until December 28, that's 30 days 13 from when we filed, to determine whether the 14 transaction requires further investigation.
15 We're communicating with the FTC during this 16 period. We're committed to communicating the 17 agency's decision to you as soon as we can. And 18 we're similarly committed to communicating with 19 other agencies, including the European commission 20 and Canada, with whom we expect to file soon, and 21 to communicate the status of this process to you

1 as well.

2 What I can say to you today is that the 3 regulatory approval process is on track. Thus 4 far there have been no surprises. And Charlie
5 Fenton and his team in Towson, Bruce Beatt
6 and his team in New Britain, and many,
7 many of you in the room have done a lot already 8 to get this process to where it is.

9 In addition to the regulatory approval 10 process, we must also ensure that the 11 shareholders of both companies approve the 12 transaction, that they fully understand the value 13 of the combined company, and the benefits that 14 new Stanley Black & Decker will generate. And 15 thus far, they certainly appear to be in that 16 frame of mind.

17 But to that end, as you may have seen,
18 we filed Form S-4 with the United States
19 Securities and Exchange Commission just a week 20 ago or a week ago Friday on December 4. This is 21 a form that's used to register securities that

1 will be issued in a business combination 2 transaction such as ours. And it can and should 3 essentially be viewed as a draft proxy statement.
4 It outlines the merger proposal in far greater 5 detail, nearly 200 pages, and it outlines that to 6 our shareholders and other interested 7 stakeholders.

8 This document was filed with the SEC, as 9 I mentioned, just a short time ago, and they will 10 review and comment on our filings within the next 11 several weeks. When the SEC confirms they're 12 comfortable with the Form S-4, we are then in a 13 position to go forward and schedule the 14 shareholder vote.

15 Both Stanley and Black & Decker have 16 separately retained world-class proxy 17 solicitation firms to help communicate the 18 inherent value of the transaction for our 19 shareholders. And again, we're committed to 20 communicating progress of the shareholder
21 approval process as soon as we have information

1 and as soon as we're able to do so with you and 2 all of your associates. Again, I can say to you
3 that at this stage the shareholder approval
4 process is on track and thus far we've had no
5 surprises on that end.

6 And while we've been diligently
7 pursuing the regulatory and shareholder approval, 8 we've also begun to tackle the enormous task of 9 successfully integrating our two companies. It's 10 crucial to note that we currently are and as a 11 consequence continue to operate as two separate 12 companies. However, until closing and before 13 closing there are certain activities that we have 14 been advised by our counsel we can participate 15 in, and both parties, along with Bain & Company, 16 a third-party consulting firm and our joint 17 integration partner, have begun those integration 18 activities.

19 Stanley has successfully completed and 20 integrated 52 acquisitions in the past six years 21 and along the way developed and refined an

1 integration process that has become, I think, a 2 true core competency at Stanley. That process is 3 based on three key principles: First and 4 foremost, ensure that we capture the value in the 5 transaction; second, ensure that we resolve any 6 personnel issues as quickly and proactively as 7 possible; and third, ensure that we focus the 8 integration process on key decisions and to 9 minimize the distractions to our core or base 10 business. Focus on the big issues and follow the 11 money.

12 To achieve these three goals, we employ 13 a relatively simple methodology. We develop an 14 integration plan for the first hundred days post 15 closing, and we finalize that plan prior to the 16 close. Now, that obviously doesn't mean that we 17 will be successfully integrated in a hundred 18 days, but it does mean that we will have 19 prioritized the most important actions that need 20 to take place and will be in a position to 21 execute those programs very quickly after

1 closing.

2 That integration plan will reflect the 3 input and seek consensus from both management 4 teams prior to close, and we're already hard at 5 work in that planning process. And finally, we 6 have established an integration management team,
7 rhythms, and milestones that we have found 8 to be successful in helping keep a firm grip on 9 the progress of all phases and areas of the 10 integration. This system gives us regular 11 visibility into the successful integration on all 12 levels and enables quick escalation and 13 resolution of issues as they arise.

14 Using these simple principles and 15 methodologies, just for an example, Stanley has 16 grown its security business from $150 million in 17 2002 to $1.6 billion in 2008. We've done it 18 while retaining and promoting top leaders at 19 companies that have been acquired, and we've done 20 it while retaining significant operations in 21 their local communities, both of which we fully

1 expect to continue in the future. We will be 2 happy to dwell on that more in the Q & A section 3 as time allows.

4 We've even successfully
5 reverse-integrated pieces of our existing Stanley 6 business into newly acquired companies whose 7 operations and processes were stronger than ours,
8 using the same principles and methodology.
9 That's because a successful process doesn't keep 10 one business on top of another. It truly 11 integrates the best of each company and it 12 positions the combined company to leverage its 13 strengths for future growth. And this is our 14 plan for Stanley Black & Decker.

15 And we're farther along in this 16 integration process than you may think. We have 17 already identified the key business functional 18 and regional integration teams, as well as 19 integration leaders from both companies. We held 20 our first integration leadership summit with 21 those teams at Stanley Center for Learning and

1 Innovation at New Britain last week and we 2 clearly outlined expectations for delivery at our 3 next integration summit which will be held in the 4 middle of January.

5 I'm going to take a moment to talk 6 through the next slide, which, in addition to 7 looking like an eye chart and seeming very 8 complicated, may, once you get more familiar with 9 it, and hopefully will, make a lot of sense.
10 I'll emphasize it's not an organization chart but 11 an overview of our integration teams and our 12 integration process. I'll also note that you're 13 going to receive a little more in-depth look at 14 this chart, along with quick communication about 15 it, within the next couple of days or so to 16 provide the basis to ask even more questions.

17 At the top is what we call the 18 Integration Steering Committee. And along with 19 Nolan and me we have our chief operating officer, 20 Jim Loree; Stanley's chief financial officer, Don 21 Allan; president of Stanley's European

1 operations, Massimo Grassi; and Mark Mathieu, 2 head of human resources.

3 The role of the steering committee is to 4 provide oversight, direction, and issue
5 resolution throughout the entire integration
6 process. And you may think that that's a 7 detached or uninvolved group or we're detached 8 and not particularly involved at that level. I 9 can assure you that the opposite is true.

10 We meet weekly for two hours, or more if 11 necessary, to review every open project and 12 ensure the teams are moving in the right 13 direction and properly resourced to facilitate 14 successful integration. It doesn't guarantee 15 success, but it helps avoid surprises and ensures 16 that we can reallocate resources whenever a 17 rudder adjustment is needed.

18 The integration management office, IMO, 19 oversees the business unit and functional and 20 regional shared service teams. In addition to 21 Brett Bontrager, whose name you see on the chart,

1 who has successfully led many of Stanley's recent 2 integrations, Tony Milando will co-chair the IMO 3 from the Black & Decker side. This team will have 4 leadership, will also have leadership direction 5 from information technology, human resource and 6 finance leaders, again both companies. And at 7 the business unit and functional or regional 8 level, that's where the work of integrating the 9 two companies and building the new Stanley Black 10 & Decker truly begins.

11 Now, I won't go through the entire lower 12 portion of the slide that you see before you, 13 because I know it's hard to read, but I do want 14 to point out a couple things. And again, you'll 15 see it in a couple days. It will be in your 16 e-mail.

17 One, while I said it isn't an 18 organization chart, it does provide an indication 19 directionally of how we think the integration 20 will proceed. Two, and this is critical -- I've 21 said it already -- note that each team is staffed

1 by a Stanley person and a Black & Decker person.
2 We spent a lot of time carefully choosing the 3 right people for these roles. And you may be 4 wondering why we chose one person over another or 5 we may choose or have chosen one person over you.
6 Some of you may even be thankful your names 7 aren't on that chart and you can just continue to 8 run your businesses every day and focus on the 9 core, which is what we've asked you to do.

10 But the simple truth is that the 11 overwhelming majority of you will be involved in 12 one capacity or another during the integration 13 process. One of the critical missteps that 14 companies can make during integration is to lose 15 focus on the base business, and we haven't chosen 16 business line leaders just for that reason, from 17 either Stanley or Black & Decker. The most 18 consistent theme in the customer feedback when 19 Nolan and I spoke to our largest customers is 20 that's great, that's great for you, it's great 21 for us. Please stay focused on us and our

1 business with you while this merger is closing
2 and while you're integrating these two companies.

3 So your job is to run the business or 4 focus on your function or region with as much 5 passion and dedication as you've always shown.
6 However, when you are asked for help by one of 7 these integration team members, I would ask that 8 you provide your experience and your assistance 9 in helping that team as quickly and thoroughly as 10 feasible, also the experience and assistance of 11 your team members.

12 Again, while this is not an organization
13 chart, I realize you all have a vested interest 14 in how the new company will look. And I do want 15 to give you an idea of some of the upcoming next 16 steps. We're aiming to share the high-level 17 business structure with you in mid-January. This 18 structure will lay out how we feel the new 19 company will operate. And when you see it, it 20 will be first on the business unit level and it 21 will take into account the recommendations of the

1 executive leadership and integration teams of 2 both businesses, giving weight to all
3 recommendations to ensure that we are moving 4 forward with a structure capable of realizing the 5 full synergies, but that also makes logical sense 6 and positions us for future growth.

7 Very shortly afterwards we'll finalize
8 the business structure, in late January or early 9 February, and we'll be in a position to provide 10 additional details around the high-level
11 organization structure of the combined company, 12 including key leadership roles, at that time.
13 Now, obviously I recognize that you're both 14 interested and invested in being kept up to date 15 on all of these developments, and I'm committed 16 to sharing these things with you as soon as we 17 are able to do so.

18 In the meantime, in mid-January, we'll 19 be holding our second integration summit, and at 20 that point will be much further along in our 21 integration process with more to share with you

1 on the progress, success, and the level of your 2 involvement in the exciting work of integrating 3 our two companies to build the new Stanley
4 Black & Decker.

5 Our vision for the future is very clear.
6 Stanley Black & Decker will be better positioned
7 to pursue profitable growth than either company
8 would have been separately. We expect in just a 9 few years we'll be an enterprise generating 10 approximately a billion dollars in free cash 11 flow, $1.5 billion in EBITDA as Nolan mentioned, 12 with the opportunity to fuel our growth engine 13 and invest in high-growth platform such as 14 security solutions and engineered fasteners as 15 well as pursue other new opportunities while at 16 the same time supporting the organic growth and 17 growth opportunities in our core power and hand 18 tools platforms.

19 We'll have increased talent, scale, and 20 resources to compete globally. And there are 21 growth opportunities that we've just begun to

1 explore, particularly in developing markets such 2 as Asia and Eastern Europe, and even in developed 3 markets where we have little or no product
4 overlap but channel and distribution synergies.

5 As you know, the expected $350 million 6 in cost synergies were a very important part of 7 why this deal made so much sense. And management 8 of the combined company will be laser-focused on 9 achieving these synergies in order to effectively 10 meet the goals and exceed expectations. The 11 sooner we can achieve our stated synergy goals, 12 the sooner we can reinvest in the business and 13 grow the combined enterprises.

14 Hopefully you've heard the key word the 15 last couple minutes in all of this, and that's 16 growth, probably the most important aspect of 17 this transaction and clearly the most exciting 18 prospect for all of us. This transaction is the 19 means to a very bright future. And while we all 20 have a lot of work to do ahead to meet and exceed 21 all the goals for Stanley Black & Decker, the

1 opportunities are plentiful and our potential
2 together is tremendous. When you look across all 3 of our stakeholder groups, you'll see that 4 everyone should share in the significant upside 5 expected from the transaction.

6 Shareholders of both companies will 7 benefit from the realization of synergies,
8 operating margin expansion, and expanded growth 9 opportunities. Employees of both companies will 10 have new opportunities as part of a much larger, 11 globally diversified industrial leader. And 12 customers of both companies will benefit from the 13 combined companies' exceptionally broad array of 14 products and services, world-class innovation
15 processes, and commitment to operational 16 excellence.

17 And as evidenced by our respective stock 18 prices, investors clearly see the potential of 19 our new company. Nolan mentioned Ben Griswold's 20 reaction on the Black & Decker board's side. The 21 advisers advising Stanley said less than one in

1 25 times in an all-stock merger does the stocks
2 of both companies go up at all, let alone ten and 3 30 percent. Unprecedented, to use Ben Griswold's 4 words.

5 As I've learned in my conversations with 6 key customers, they see the opportunity for our 7 new company. And it's my hope that you, as 8 Stanley Black & Decker employees, also see the 9 potential as well as the opportunity in our new 10 company.

11 I'd like for just one more thing to be 12 clear when you leave here today. We can't look 13 at the combination of Stanley and Black & Decker
14 as the finish line. Completing the integration 15 work, which will unquestionably be intense over 16 the next few months, that's not the finish line 17 either. While I am confident we'll achieve both 18 the combination and the synergies, once we have 19 done so, it won't be the end of the race.
20 Instead, we have to look at these two things as 21 milestones en route to a much longer and exciting

1 journey.

2 This transaction positions Stanley Black 3 & Decker to achieve something that, as I've 4 already said, we simply couldn't achieve 5 separately. It positions us to be stronger and 6 more diversified. It puts us in a place to grow
7 and reach new heights. And, as you might expect, 8 it guarantees nothing without a lot of hard work.

9 When I came to Stanley in 2004, it was 10 less than a $2.5 billion company. Together with 11 the management team, we've almost doubled in size 12 while increasing margins and strengthening our 13 portfolio. And once the proposed transaction, 14 the merger of Stanley and Black & Decker takes 15 place, the company will have doubled in size 16 again.

17 But that's just the beginning.
18 Together with you, there is no intention of 19 stopping there. I'm fully confident that our 20 combined management teams and our combined
21 companies can grow the new Stanley Black & Decker

1 even more successfully, particularly more 2 successfully than either company has grown in the 3 past.

4 Easy to say. Let me tell you why I
5 think it will be successful. Beyond our 6 respective track records, beyond the tested and 7 proven integration methodology, beyond the 8 similarities in our mission and our strategies, 9 and beyond all the things that we have that have 10 made this combination attractive in the first 11 place, we have passionate, capable people and we 12 have winning cultures. That what's going to make 13 the difference as we move forward. It's you and 14 it's the approximately 40,000 future Stanley 15 Black & Decker employees who are committed to 16 integrity, accountability, and respect, that will 17 not only position the company for growth but will 18 also drive us towards success. It's your passion 19 for innovation, for customer satisfaction, and 20 for operational excellence that gives me the 21 confidence that we'll achieve successful

1 integration quickly and begin to move forward 2 toward the future as one company, sooner rather 3 than later, so that we can begin to realize the 4 true potential of the combination of these two 5 companies.

6 I'll close by saying this:
7 Successfully integrating Stanley and Black &
8 Decker is a monumental task. And when we achieve 9 it, we will have accomplished something to really 10 be proud of. Realizing the synergies and 11 unlocking value of the combined company is also a 12 monumental task. And when we achieve it, we will 13 have accomplished something huge. But the true 14 excitement comes from the potential of the 15 combination of Stanley and Black & Decker. With 16 the power of one combined Stanley Black & Decker, 17 the possibilities are immeasurable.

18 Before I take the questions, I'd like to 19 make two final notes. One, and this is based on 20 feedback over the last six weeks, one, I know you 21 want to hear from us. We're committed to openly

1 and transparently communicating throughout this 2 process to the largest extent that we possibly 3 can. But we also want to hear from you as well.

4 In the very near future many of you will 5 be receiving an invitation to participate in an 6 online survey designed to gauge your perceptions 7 of the culture, both at Black & Decker and at 8 Stanley. Please give this survey the thought and 9 attention that it deserves. Stanley's leadership 10 team will receive the exact same survey. You 11 will be the leaders of the combined Stanley Black 12 & Decker, and your thoughts are critical, not 13 only in helping us to assess and form a baseline 14 and identify areas to address, but also in 15 shaping the identity of the new company.

16 And, two, it's been a long, difficult
17 and exciting year for both companies. We began 18 the year amidst the worst economic operating 19 environment that I've ever seen in my career, and 20 we've ended the year with an historic 21 announcement that we're forming a new Stanley

1 Black & Decker. While the hard work of 2 integrating our two companies has only begun, I'd 3 like to reiterate that shareholder approval, 4 regulatory approval, and integration planning are 5 on track, and we're committed to answering some 6 of your most important questions by mid-January.

7 So during this busy season take a few
8 moments to refresh and recharge for the work
9 that's ahead of us. I'd also ask you to take a 10 little extra care to ensure the safety of 11 yourselves, your colleagues, and your families.

12 And I'll take this opportunity with the first 13 meeting with many of you to offer my best wishes 14 for a happy, healthy holiday season, and a 15 prosperous new year together.

16 It's an exciting time to be part of the 17 this company. And we have a unique opportunity 18 here to make our mark on a company with almost, 19 with more than 250 years of combined history, 20 legacy, and success. And I, for one, am totally 21 confident that our best days are before us, not

1 behind us.

2 Thanks very much. Nolan and I are now

3 happy to take your questions.

4 QUESTION AND ANSWER SESSION

5 MR. COOPER: Good morning. My name is

6 Jeff Cooper. I'm the vice-president of global

7 product development for the consumer products

8 group. We have seen the positive reaction to the 9 stock price, the rise of the stock prices in both

10 companies, but could you expand a little bit

11 further on the reaction from both the shareholder

12 community as well as our key customers?

13 MR. ARCHIBALD: I spoke personally with

14 the CEOs of all of our large customers, and they 15 were very enthusiastic about this combination.

16 It was clear they had respect for both companies

17 and they felt like we could serve them better

18 than we even had on a standalone basis. And so

19 they were very enthusiastic.

20 I also met with virtually all of our

21 major shareholders. They were even more

1 enthusiastic. And you can see by what's happened
2 to the stock price. They voted with their 3 wallets. And almost to a person they were very, 4 very pleased with not only what has happened so
5 far but can happen as a result of the combined 6 power of both these companies. So both those 7 groups, shareholders and our customers, are very, 8 very pleased so far.

9 MR. LUNDGREN: And I'll just echo what 10 Nolan said. The day of the announcement, of 11 course, you know, not with all the information
12 here, Nolan and I spoke to some of our customers 13 and investors together, and some separately. The 14 reaction was identical.

15 The only thing I could add, not 16 inconsistent with what Nolan had said, I have 17 been asked by many Black & Decker shareholders 18 who don't own Stanley stock currently, 19 remembering that they're going to own a lot of it 20 when the deal closes, to just understand a little 21 more about Stanley. Because obviously they have

1 invested in Black & Decker and this was a very,
2 very large commitment in their future. Nolan's
3 point: Black & Decker's stock is up 30 percent
4 since the announcement, so they feel very good
5 about it. Those were very rewarding and, you
6 know, highly informative meetings. And I guess 7 all we can say is touch wood, so far so good, 8 unprecedented investor reaction.

9 Remember, there's 50 percent overlap in 10 ownership for these two companies. That's why 11 such a large percentage of the investor base 12 understood the logic day one and has stuck with 13 it about six weeks later, where, you know, both 14 stocks continue to trade extraordinarily well, 15 and the customers have been very supportive.

16 MR. COOPER: Thank you very much.

17 MR. FREDERICK: Good morning. My name
18 is Bill Frederick, director of engineering.

19 And, John, we do have a golfer that we think will 20 accept your challenge.

21 MR. LUNDGREN: That was your boss, it

1 wasn't me. Let me just say, and I'm only going
2 to say this once: The older I get, the better I
3 used to be. But I'll do my best and we'll play 4 for fun.

5 MR. FREDERICK: Seriously, my question
6 is, could you share with us at this time any 7 thoughts you have for the Towson Design Center 8 and, if possible, all the design centers, like 9 our Spennymoor, England facility?

10 MR. LUNDGREN: I'll take it. While 11 there was so much, if you will, doom and gloom in 12 the local press when this was announced, you 13 know, was it Mark Twain who said the rumors of my 14 death are greatly exaggerated? Mark Twain was 15 from Hartford, by the way. Mark Twain House is 16 in Hartford. It's a National Historic Monument.
17 He lived there many years.

18 The tough side first: Nolan has already 19 said it. We don't need two corporate 20 headquarters. Yet that being said, there is 21 still a role going forward for many, many, many

1 of the highly-skilled functional corporate staff
2 professionals within Black & Decker. At the risk 3 of oversimplifying, nothing else will change and 4 in fact may grow in importance.

5 This is the epicenter of the most 6 powerful, biggest, best power tools business in 7 the world. I may look stupid, but why would I
8 want to change that? Simply said. The best
9 example, perhaps, I can give you -- so the words, 10 because we can't commit to anything that we 11 aren't going to deliver later, we have been very 12 careful, we will maintain a major presence in 13 Towson. Let me say, we will maintain a huge 14 presence in Towson.

15 And the best example I think I can give 16 you is six years ago Stanley bought Best Locks, 17 an 80-year-old company headquartered in 18 Indianapolis, privately held. We already did 19 compete with Baldwin and Kwikset and some of the 20 others, but Best was known for the 21 interchangeable cores and patented locks,

1 wonderful business headquartered in Indianapolis.
2 It was about 200 million in revenue. Some very 3 good people joined the Stanley security business, 4 which at the time of about $150 million in 5 revenue.

6 Today Stanley's security business is 1.6
7 billion in revenue. 100 percent of our security 8 business is managed from Indianapolis as that's 9 expanding to take up -- because that's where the 10 expertise is. So where the people are, where the 11 knowledge lies, where the intellectual property
12 is -- we're a global company.

13 I think the second example is our 14 industrial automotive platform globally is run 15 from Morangis, France, not New Britain,
16 Connecticut. We bought a company called Facom, 17 an iconic $500 million, roughly, mechanics tools 18 firm. Most of your North American and those of 19 you who have spent time in Europe, if you're 20 working on a Ferrari, if you're working on a 21 Formula One car, you were using Facom tools.

1 They were without question the best
2 collection or center of expertise for our global 3 mechanics tools business. So as we established
4 the global platform, which is how we try to run
5 our businesses, it stayed in Morangis, France.
6 We have a few people in Dallas who work for the 7 folks in Morangis, and we have a few people 8 spread around the country.

9 But simply said, keep the expertise
10 together, keep where the people are. Towson will 11 be a major presence for years to come. And I 12 know it's just a -- it's symbolic that corporate 13 headquarters per se won't be here, but the 14 buildings will be, the overall majority of the 15 people will be.

16 And, you know, that was one of the three 17 jewels, you know, from Stanley's perspective in 18 combining this business. So tremendous presence 19 in Towson going forward. And I'll even mention, 20 I'm sure, based on what I read, more than anybody
21 here is expecting. And, you know, I can't say

1 any more than that at this stage of the process.
2 There is just a phenomenal business and wealth of 3 knowledge and experience and wisdom that resides
4 in Towson. There's no reason to move.

5 MR. FREDERICK: Thanks.

6 MS. ERVIN: Good morning. My name is 7 Jennifer Ervin. I manage and oversee all of our 8 brand licensing for the industrial products
9 groups. I'd like to ask John a question, if I 10 could.

11 At Black & Decker licensees have become 12 a more increasingly important part of our growth 13 strategy. The DeWalt business specifically, we 14 focused on developing innovative products, 15 entering the right categories selectively, and 16 finding the right partners that we can co-market 17 and cross-develop products together.

18 MR. LUNDGREN: Absolutely.

19 MS. ERVIN: I want to learn more about 20 Stanley's approach to that and how you see those 21 two businesses integrating.

1 MR. LUNDGREN: Sure. Thank you for that 2 question, because it's very important to us as 3 well. My sense is you probably have been at it a 4 little longer and maybe even more aggressively 5 than Stanley. But from what I can understand at 6 this stage, the systems are quite similar.
7 Stanley has been seriously at it for only about 8 ten years, even though we're a 166-year-old
9 company, and I think you've got a sophisticated 10 process in place longer than that.

11 It's very important. The marketing guys
12 will feel good about this, the finance guys
13 won't. I think of licensing revenues as a 14 virtuous circle as in continuous brand support.
15 What we earn in licensing we reinvest in brand 16 support, because the right to earn that money is 17 because of the strength of our brand. Jim Loree
18 and Don Allan want to put that in the corporate 19 coffers. But I refer to it as a virtuous circle 20 and they refer to it as a vicious cycle. So it's 21 -- I happen to be the CEO, so my philosophy

1 prevails.

2 But on a more serious note, it's a 3 meaningful source of revenue as it is in 4 Black & Decker. We have about 25 licensees. We 5 employ or use a company called Beanstalk, I'm 6 sure you're we'll aware of, who is the largest 7 licensing, I'll say, affiliate or facilitator in 8 the world. Every year Stanley is overwhelmingly 9 the brand that we license, a little bit of 10 Bostitch.

11 Every year we do what's called a brand
12 permission study, and I'm sure you've seen this 13 with the Black & Decker brand and the DeWalt 14 brand. 85 percent of the people with whom we 15 surveyed, as we looked for relevant categories
16 and relevant partners, thought Stanley made work
17 gloves. We didn't. We don't. But two years
18 later, it's a $20 million licensing program.

19 So that's how we go about it. And our 20 primary licensees are both in the U.S. and 21 Europe. We are active participants in SPLICE,

1 who I'm sure you're familiar with, is the, if you 2 will, the nonprofit governing body. And to 3 ensure that we are maximizing the value and 4 potential of our brand, our, if you will,
5 licensing summits, is what we would call them,
6 where some partners but all of our brand people
7 are represented. The last one we did at Fenway 8 Park, and it was really exciting, you know, with 9 all the opportunities. The next one will be at 10 the Liverpool Football Club in the UK where they 11 actually have some stadium advertising
12 electronically. And then lastly, and I don't 13 think it's a conflict, we do run that completely 14 centrally. We do have a corporate vice-president 15 of brand marketing who reports to Jim Loree, who 16 I think ensures -- because the Stanley brand does 17 transcend three different segments within 18 Stanley. So while I think you have licensing 19 specialists within the three businesses, to the 20 extent I understand it, the methodology is 21 identical. We do control that centrally as

1 opposed to within the divisions.

2 But it's something we think very 3 seriously about. We think that, our initial 4 view, Black & Decker has done a great job of 5 licensing both Black & Decker and DeWalt.

6 Last aside: My wife's entire 7 company -- she runs a manufacturing company -- 8 they wear DeWalt safety glasses. And it used to 9 really bother me. Now I think it's terrific.

10 MS. ERVIN: Thank you.

11 MS. FURLOUGH-MORRIS: Hi. My name is 12 Stephanie Furlough-Morris. I work in finance, 13 director of finance. My question is around the 14 integration and your framework. It looks like a 15 very robust process. With the size of this 16 integration, what key changes have you made to 17 that framework, if any? And I guess what 18 failures should we be on the lookout for?

19 MR. LUNDGREN: Well, the failures you
20 should be on the lookout for, I want you to get 21 those to me first.

1 Well, as said, two things: The 2 question on because of the magnitude of it, it's 3 something we have done at the outset is recognize 4 the magnitude. Brett Brontrager, whose name I 5 mentioned once, is our best -- he might be the 6 best in the world, or one of the best in the 7 world, but he's certainly our best. He has done
8 this successfully with Facom, he's done this 9 successfully with security integrations.

10 And we have assigned Brett and about 13
11 to 15 people full time. So the biggest change 12 is, as opposed to saying, you know, keep your 13 finance organization running and don't miss any 14 deadlines and, oh, by the way, would you 15 participate on the integration? We have taken a 16 very senior leader. Tony will do the same thing 17 from the Black & Decker side. These are 18 full-time assignments for 12 to 24, even 36 19 months if that's what it takes. So that's the 20 most important thing we've done: Taken the very 21 best people we have, dedicating them full time to

1 this activity, to be joined at the hip with 2 either their business or functional or regional 3 counterpart.

4 In terms of what failures you should be 5 on the lookout for, I don't know. There's -- it
6 would take until Christmas Eve to tell you all 7 the failures that we've encountered or the 8 problems we've encountered, but fortunately most 9 of which we resolved before they become 10 game-changers or deal-wreckers.

11 And that's the whole idea of this 12 process. If you think about it, every two weeks 13 that team is going to be reporting out to the 14 steering committee that Nolan and I will sit on 15 as well as four senior executives and then, you 16 know, run by the Integration Management Office.

17 And I'll describe the process very 18 quickly. But as I describe it, and you'll see 19 how in my prepared remarks I said it doesn't 20 guarantee success. And it certainly doesn't 21 mean there won't be problems. But it certainly

1 helps reduce the big surprises and gives us
2 every opportunity to reallocate resources, fix
3 the problem as it arises. Or if we say that's a 4 problem we didn't anticipate or a failure to 5 achieve synergy, where are we going to find 6 another synergy to fill that gap.

7 And it is that simple as -- let's say
8 it's the European informational technology 9 integration team. We're looking at a dashboard
10 with key program milestones and maybe some cost 11 savings, you know, on the Y-axis and some cost 12 savings on the X-axis, or time. And it's boxes 13 with lots of numbers and way too many to read, 14 and they're color-coded, red, yellow, green. I
15 probably don't need to say any more. But green, 16 no problem; yellow, unless it stays yellow
17 forever we save up front.

18 But if something is red, what is wrong?
19 You know, is it something where we missed
20 because we made a bad estimate? We need to go 21 find synergies somewhere else to fill that gap.

1 Or is it something that's behind schedule and it
2 will be yellow and then green?

3 But simply said, the folks running
4 these teams -- this sounds kind of tough -- 5 there's nowhere to hide. You know, they can't 6 say -- no one can say, I didn't advance this 7 program because I couldn't get the approvals to 8 spend the money. I'm sorry, you have the 9 executive chairman and CEO on the phone every 10 two weeks. What more do you need?

11 So it's the rhythm and rigor of the 12 system. It's the process that's tested and 13 proven. And it's the regularity of the meetings 14 and the communication that improve the 15 likelihood for success. I won't say it will 16 guarantee it, but we've just basically taken a 17 tested and proven process and model and staffed 18 it with our very best people, staffed it more 19 fully with the help of Bain, who you'll find are 20 very, very, very bright people. And there's a 21 Bain consultant on every one of these teams.

1 They know Stanley quite well.

2 I learned in the process that

3 Black & Decker was Bain's first client many

4 years ago. They know the business. They know

5 the industry well. They know the people well.

6 They're experts in this process as well. So

7 we've invested in Bain's extra help as well.

8 So a long answer to a very simple

9 question. But that's the framework we put in 10 place, not to guarantee but to dramatically

11 increase the likelihood of success.

12 MS. FURLOUGH-MORRIS: Thank you.

13 MR. LUNDGREN: Thank you.

14 How are we doing? Anybody else?

15 It's about, Nolan, where we thought

16 we'd be schedule-wise. Are we on schedule?

17 MR. ARCHIBALD: We are.

18 MR. LUNDGREN: We're on schedule.

19 Listen, it's just -- again, I want to 20 thank you, thank Nolan and all of you for the 21 opportunity to be here. You do have my

1 commitment that we will communicate as 2 regularly, as frequently with new information as 3 we can. Recognize there are things we would 4 love to say that we can't, recognize that we 5 understand there are things you'd love to know 6 that we don't know the answers to yet.

7 Keep an open dialogue. As you know,
8 there are websites, there's a great executive 9 management team here, and there's one in New 10 Britain to ask your questions. I have not met 11 most of you in the room. When I opened it up 12 for questions and answers, or this applies going 13 forward: The only bad question is the one you 14 have and you don't ask. Okay? If we can't 15 answer it, we'll tell you. But the only bad 16 question is the question you have and you don't 17 ask it. So please, as I said, we need your 18 input as much as you need our communication.

19 Thanks a lot for your time this 20 morning, and I really look forward to working 21 with all of you as we build a great new company.

1 MR. ARCHIBALD: Thank you.
